

ABSTRACT

Library science is one of the study programs that has extensive job opportunities. Information professional is one of the job opportunities for library scientists. This research deals with the perception Library Science Diponegoro University students about job opportunities for information professional. The purpose of this research is to study the perception Library Science Diponegoro University students on information professional job opportunities. The method used in this study is a quantitative method using 84 respondents. The analysis in this study uses statistical descriptive analysis. The results of this study indicate that affective aspect has the highest average value of 3.03 which is included in the good category. Furthermore, it was followed by the cognitive aspect which has an average value of 2.93, and is categorized as good. The lowest average value in the conative aspect is 2.89 in the good category. found in the 6th statement in the cognitive aspect of the chances of respondents get information from acquaintances who worked as information professional, and the 7th statement in the affective aspects of interest in information professional. Overall, the average value means that every aspect is categorized as good, meaning that the perception of Library Science, Diponegoro students about information professional job opportunities is good.

Keywords: information professional; library science; job opportunities