1	He's debating at the Union. I was just stealing his "pathetic" symphony. I'm reading a paper on Tchaikovsky, but I cannot find the third movement. If it's here at all, which I don't think it is. Fetherstonhaugh's got a Pianola.	✓
2	Appalling vac. I nearly wrote to you about it. My mother started flinging the cat about because I wouldn't go to Communion on Christmas Day. I mean, I'm unorthodox. I'm not a Christian. It was imperative that I made a stand.	✓
3	That's 'cause you've never done anything she wouldn't approve,	✓

	I expect. You never will
4	Give me a cigarette, would you?		✓
5	I'm disgusted with mine. I despise her character. There. I've told you something no one else in the world knows.			✓
6	Tell me about your home life.		✓
7	Yes, it was. Rotten. Misery and hell. Ow! That really hurt. Ow!			✓
8	That I love you.	✓
9	Hall, don't be so stupid. You must know that to be alone with you hurts me.	✓
10	No, please don't reopen it. It's over.		✓
11	You'll get out. It's only disgust. You haven't done anything to be ashamed of. You don't know what hell's really like.	✓
12	Look, you've been thoroughly decent from first to last. So decent that I mistook your friendliness. I thought it was... something else.			✓

	I'm sorry to have insulted you.
13	Rubbish! As you so rightly said. Good night.			✓
14	I'm thankful that it was into your hands I fell. Most men would have reported me to the dean... or the police.			✓
15	Look. It's like the good, blundering creature that you are to try to comfort me, but there are limits.	✓
16	Do you realize... I -I would have gone through life half-awake if you'd had the decency to leave me alone?			✓
17	I think- I think it would bring us - I think it would bring us down. I think it would spoil everything.	✓
18	This harmony. Body, mind, soul. I don't think women have even guessed. But you know.	✓
19	Do you think I might have one of your cigarettes?		✓
20	You must understand, if I were to give you a testimonial, it would make me a	✓ sitting duck to any prosecution.

21	Yes, thank you, Maurice. I'm fine. Please, don't nanny me.		✓
22	Yes, thank you, Maurice. I'm fine. Please, don't nanny me			✓
23	Sorry.			✓
24	I suppose I ought to have the nurse.	✓
25	Thank you. Thank you very, very much for being so kind.			✓
26	I can't go on being such a bore to your family, Maurice.			✓
27	Mother. Mother, get in.		✓
28	You will never mention that subject again, Simcox while you remain in employment here.		✓
29	Horrible.			✓
30	Maurice doesn't know.	✓
31	I was trying to work things out, and I couldn't explain in a letter.	✓
32	I've thought about this solidly for the last month and a half. We've got to change, you and I.	✓
33	Precisely. By continuing like this, you and I are risking	✓ everything we have. Our careers, our- our families, our names.

34	There are other ways to be happy, you know. We could... explore those a little.	✓
35	Maurice, think how easy life is for people who don't have to go through all this. This... secrecy. Never being able to talk about the person whom you're in love with to anybody. Imagining the servants are thinking things. And always being asked when you're gonna get married, and having every bloody girl paraded in front of you 'cause your family's so desperate.	✓
36	No one. But don't you think it would be wonderful if there - if there was someone who I could care about in the same way that I do about you?	✓
37	For God's sake, Maurice... hold your tongue for a moment.		✓

38	If I were in love with anyone now... then it would be with some nice girl. Like Ada.	✓
39	You must shut up and concentrate, Maurice.		✓
40	Maurice, don't make it worse.		✓
41	Maurice? Don't be an ass.			✓
42	Maurice? Don't be an ass.		✓
43	Can't you come down to Pendersleigh next week?		✓
44	Well, uh, come in September. Not October, because that's almost certainly the by-election. But come in September and see us through that awful Park versus Village cricket match.		✓
45	But damn it, he's only just arrived.			✓
46	Milly, bring a basin and a duster, and get one of the men to help shift the piano. The rain's come through again.		✓
47	Shall I place this lamp here? Ah, Scudder. Shift the piano, would you,		✓ and, um, take up the carpet. Tomorrow you'd better go up and attack that roof again.

48	I just wanted to show that I hadn't forgotten the past. But I agree. Let's not mention it again.		✓
49	Well, instead of that muddle last year. With you. Quits, and I'll go.	✓
50	Come back here as soon as you can, won't you?		✓
51	You're coming back very soon. Good luck.		✓
52	Scudder? Well, he's a little bit smart, but Anne would say I'm being unfair. You can't expect our standard of honesty in servants.	✓
53	I do wish you'd think of Pendersleigh as your second home. Just treat it like an hotel. Come and go when you like. Doesn't matter if I'm home or not. Anne feels as I do.		✓
54	What a grotesque announcement.			✓
55	Maurice - Maurice, we did	✓ everything we could when you and I thrashed out the subject.

56	Don't allude to that. Come in here.		✓
57	Oh, good God.			✓
58	The sole excuse for any relationship between two men is that it remain purely platonic. Surely we agreed that.	✓
