ABSTRACT

Grammar learning is an important aspect of foreign language acquisition, but it is often a challenge for Applied Foreign Language students who have difficulty in understanding the concepts. This research aims to provide understanding to students who have difficulty in understanding grammar through the use of comics as learning media. This research uses a R&D method by analyzing the effectiveness of comics in presenting grammar material visually and contextually. The results showed that the use of comics as learning media can help students understand grammar more easily and increase their interest in learning. Thus, this research is expected to contribute to the development of more innovative and effective grammar learning methods for Applied Foreign Language students.
