ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

First and foremost, I want to give my biggest gratitude to Allah SWT for giving me so many chances to be here today, to be alive, and to be whole. And for always accepting, guiding, and loving me along the way until this very moment. I realized that there is no power greater than God who makes me feel like I could do whatever even if it looks impossible, and that is why I could complete this thesis.

I also want to express my deepest appreciation to my thesis advisor, Mr. Arido Laksono, S.S., M. Hum., who has been my discussion partner for the past few months, making this study possible and tangible. Thank you for all the suggestions, questions, and small jokes along the way, also for the patience throughout my journey in writing this thesis.

My ultimate gratitude also goes to;

1. The Dean of the Faculty of Humanities, Prof. Dr. Alamsyah S.S., M.Hum.
2. The Head of English Department of the Faculty of Humanities, Dr. Retno Wulandari, S.S., M.A.,
3. All the lecturers in the English Literature department who have helped me become more open-minded and more critical, especially all the lecturers in American Studies, who inspired me to choose this field of study.
4. My greatest thanks go to my whole family, who have worked so hard to give me a good education and a better life. Especially to my father, who has given everything he has in this one life of his, all for me.

5. Thank you to myself for fighting this far and for never stopping in pursuing every single ambition, creation, and benefaction until I finally understood that no one is perfect. Still, we can always try to get closer to it.
6. Thank you to all my college friends who have greeted me so warmly since day one, especially to Class C who have been my endless learning partners and the best of friends I have ever had for the past few years.
7. Thank you to my dearest friends Indira, Lovina, Salwa, and Lilis, who over the past four years have given me space to grow and always welcomed me with open arms. Until now, I have been blooming positively.
8. Thank you to my beloved long-lost sisters, ka Aisyah and ka Hana, who have always been my safe place to turn to and a comfortable space where I can share anything and say whatever is on my mind.
9. Thank you to my brothers from another mother, Dafa and Michael, for taking me around the city and creating new memories that have made my days feel lighter and brighter.
10. Thank you to all my colleagues in EDSA and especially to the Social Activist division, who were truly amazing partners throughout my one-year service. Thank you for always giving your very best and not knowing how to say less. This goes to most sincerity for all staff members, especially the juniors, Aleya, Osa, Ihya, Gracie, Ney, and my Adele.
11. Thank you to every person I met and trusted at the very end of 2023, whose names I cannot mention one by one, but they are still giving me direction and life lessons until now.

12. Thank you also to the several sports and athletes I have watched in the past few months that have given me a sense within myself to be more passionate and to feel more alive, especially Formula 1 and Ice Hockey.
13. Thank you to my lovely pet turtle, KeuKeu. Who has accompanied me for almost a year now. Also, thank you to all my three beloved fish that are no longer here, but they are still remembered as angels, especially Hans.
14. And lastly, my deepest thanks go to my longtime friends (junior and senior high school mates) who have supported me along the way, even before I ever moved to study in another city. This goes hard for Sabrina Valendia.

This thesis still requires many improvements, as I realize that it is far from perfection. Therefore, any constructive recommendations and suggestions would be welcomed and appreciated. Finally, I hope that this research will be useful for those who want to learn more about caste and racism.
