APPENDIX

The analysis process of the transitivity clauses in this work concerns the process type, the participant, and the circumstance (if present). I utilized tables to show the transitivity configuration of each clause so that I could present to the readers which parts of a clause were the process type, the participant, and the circumstantial element. Then, I paid close attention to every part of a clause revealed about Tai Lung. For example, to analyze the clause “Using the Goose’s feather to pick the lock, Tai Lung bursts free from his armor,” I first break the clause using the tables below:

Using the Goose’s feather to pick the lock,	Tai Lung	burst free	from his armor
Circ: manner	Actor	Pr: material	Circ: loc
Material Process

I then look at each part of the clause to analyze what this datum might tell me about Tai Lung. The manner circumstance exhibits that Tai Lung was capable of seeing an opportunity although it was small. The circumstance of location then denotes that Tai Lung understood the mechanism of the armor which immobilized him and a way to unlock it with a tool as insignificant as a feather. His knowledge allows him to turn a falling feather into a chance to escape. Moreover, the use of a feather indicates Tai Lung’s creativity because he used it as an alternative to open the armor instead of trying to take the actual key from the warden. Then, the material process itself and the matter circumstance imply that he was too capable of utilizing the opportunity which presented itself to him. From the analysis of each part of the transitivity clause, it can be concluded Tai Lung poses intelligence which comes in handy when he is in a difficult situation.
