ABSTRACT

This research thesis discusses the determinants affecting insecure-to-secure personality development of the main female character in the movie Redeeming Love by D.J. Caruso. The objectives of the research thesis are to analyze the determinants affecting Angel's personality development and to analyze the insecure-to-secure personality development of Angel as the main character in the movie. The writer uses library research as a method of collecting the data sources uses psychological approach by applying Elizabeth Hurlock's theory. The results of this research thesis indicate that Angel's characters are cruel and professional. The eight determinants that influence Angel's insecure to secure personality development are social, sex, family, educational, aspirations and achievements and emotional determinants. Angel's insecure personality appears because of her terrifying childhood trauma and abusive environment, which covers having no faith in relationship, marriage, and God, being hopeless and unable to solve problems. Angel develops her secure personality after marrying a man named Michael Hosea and puts her trust on him. This includes having faith in relationship, marriage, and God, being full of hope and able to solve problems.
