

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

1.1 Conclusion

Every human has an inferiority feeling which has developed since early childhood. Inferiority feeling can be caused by anything. Healthy inferiority feeling brings someone to good compensation or strives her self-perfection. Personality also develops at earliest years. Parenting pattern affects children's personality. Moreover, parents have an important role and relationship to bring up their children. Parents should be the people who understand and educate their children because they are the closest people to them.

Kayla Day is the main character in the coming-of-age movie, Eighth Grade. She wants to be confident and have friends. Unfortunately, she is an introvert who has no friends to talk with. She is an introvert, but she is not always like being lonely and unconfident person. She is socially rejected by her schoolmates because she is a quiet person. Her inferiority feeling of being quiet and shy turns into inferiority complex when she is labeled as the 'most quiet' student. She makes videos to talk about herself and encourage herself to do something new. She gets nervous all the time. She has strong motivations to overcome her inferiority complex and reach her personal goals. An individual who has inferiority feelings needs support from others. In the last week of her eighth grade, she finishes her inferiority complex by accepting that she is an introvert but it does not mean that she cannot be confident person and have friends.

1.2 Suggestion

Eighth Grade is a coming-of-age movie. This movie really describes what children usually experience when they are in middle school. It is recommended for teenagers or adults who have enrolled the middle school. Commonly, the middle school students will seek for their identity, they start to be curious who they are and what they want. Apart from being able to relate to students who feel the same way, this film is also good for parents' knowledge. Parents can understand how to deal with children and what can be done to help their children in difficult times.

For general reader, Eighth Grade also shows teenagers' inferiority which can be commonly felt by everyone at their age or all age. From this movie, the causes of someone's inferiority can be caused by anything. If someone who has desires cannot do what she or he wants, the inferiority will turn out into an inferiority complex. The person who can overcome the inferiority complex will become herself or himself even it will take time. This movie is a good example that overcoming inferiority is hard, but not all of inferiority has bad impacts.

Analyzing a literary work involves that of the character is, her or his environment, and her or his problems she or he is facing to see other things in the character. The writer hopes this research can be useful and gives many insights for further research related to the inferiority complex, in particular or other related to topic in general.
