

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

Based on the discussion that has been done, I draw the conclusion that August Pullman, as the main character of a person with a disability who is stigmatized and discriminated in the movie Wonder who is the object of my research, faces several significant things that become conflicts in his life. Conditions of Auggie's character These conflicts are conflicts against syndromes, conflicts against feelings of inferiority, conflicts against discrimination or oppression, and conflicts to get true friends.

There are many forms of discrimination, one of which is discrimination against persons with disabilities contained in the Wonder film, both from the main character Auggie and other supporting characters. But of course, Discrimination against people with many obstacles such as deformed physical deformity or braids in the back hair, the whole physique is always the subject of ridicule by others hurtful words and insults by others. Of course, this discrimination was not easy for him. There was a time when he was deeply annoyed by it, but that wasn't the end of his life. Being bullied means that the position of someone who is being bullied is one step ahead of the person who is bullying him. This was proven by Auggie through the achievements he achieved at school and was recognized by everyone.
