

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

Based on the discussion that has been carried out on the existing evidence and using Ritzer's theory, I was drawing that showing scenes that show gender equality. It shows that women have an equal position with men in the feel of workplace. The position of women, their rights, obligations and involvement are all there. There are several different examples of gender equality in this film. James Bond and Naomi and supporting characters, indicates exercises of equal rights. This film achieves women's rights by allowing a woman named Naomi to drive with a man named James Bond while on a mission, and then Madeline, the female character, utilizes the same weapon used by James Bond when defending himself against enemy pursuit.

The impacts of implementing gender equality, such as good teamwork and mutual protection between genders, is visible as James collaborates with Naomi to complete the mission to destroy biological weapons and James Bond protects Mathilda, and the courtesy is returned by being handed a communication equipment to provide news.