

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

Referring to the existing analysis, it can be concluded that Moxie movie portrays women's oppressions and their resistance to opposing oppressions. Based on the five faces of oppression theory by Marion Iris Young, I only found three of them, namely marginalization, powerlessness, and violence.

In marginalization data, women's soccer team does not get new uniforms like the men's football team, even though they performed better. This proves that the women's soccer team is a marginalized group because their access is limited. The second form is powerlessness, occurs to Lucy who is not given the opportunity to speak further about the harassment she experienced, which makes her powerless. Apart from that, Kaitlynn is also experience a state of powerlessness, when she gets unfair treatment by the school principal and has to obey because of her powerless condition. This is in accordance with Young's powerlessness theory that saying powerless people are those who lack power in sounding their voice, making decision, and gets unfair treatment due to their lower status. The third data is emotional and sexual violence. The evidence of emotional violence is when Lucy experienced form of belittlement, threats, and humiliation. In sexual violence data, Kiera experienced a sexual violence when a male student slapped her butt and Emma was raped by a student in school.

On the other hand, the women also conducted resistance against oppressions. According to Cudd, resistance stems from the recognition about serious injustices and must be proceed to mitigate or at least protest the harms. To protest the oppression happens in school, they take the resistance act. It is started by Vivian who anonymously distributed Moxie posters to mobilize girls in school, together to fight oppression. They show some supports by drawing stars and hearts on their hands and holding a campaign on social media with the hashtag “Moxie Girls Fight Back”. At the end of the movie, those who support the Moxie movement come together to show that women support each other.
