

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

Words on Bathroom Walls is a movie that tells the story of a student, Adam, a youth with a mental disorder, namely Schizophrenia. Adam is diagnosed with a disease that interferes with his mental health. He gets many events in his life after that. He lived with his mother because his father decided to leave them. Adam has a hobby of cooking as well as his big dream. This movie was made by Thor Freudental and released in 2020 in the United States.

Because this study focuses on the mental disorder suffered by Adam, the analysis is divided into two parts: intrinsic and extrinsic aspects. Intrinsic aspects consist of characters and conflicts. The character analyzed in this research is Adam, the main character in the movie. Adam's hobby is cooking, and the goal is to become a great chef. Conflict analysis in this study is divided into internal and external conflicts. The internal conflict that occurs is between Adam and the three people inside him, which is the effect of the mental disorder. The external conflict occurred between Adam and Paul. Paul is his mother's lover, who suddenly lives in the same house with them. Adam did not like Paul's arrival from the start because it was considered disturbing and not on his side.

The extrinsic element of this study focuses on the mental disorder that Adam has suffered as the main character in this movie. The writer found that Adam is under pressure on himself after his father abandoned them. Adam feels everything that happens in his life is his fault. That is why Adam feels depressed and unable to talk to anyone, and thus becomes a mental disorder. Using Cherry's theory to analyze the symptoms of schizophrenia, there are two symptoms: positive and negative. Adam's positive symptoms are delusions and hallucinations, while his negative symptoms are uncontrollable and easily provoked. Adam's delusions and hallucinations are to hear strange noises and see the three people who are always following him

Then, the writer finds the results by using the Kraepelin theory about the type of schizophrenia experienced by Adam, and it considers that there are three types of schizophrenia: schizophrenia simplex, schizophrenia hebephrenic, and schizophrenia paranoid. Adam's symptoms affect his life. Once those closest to Adam know of his mental disorder, they withdraw from him. Adam is expelled from school and loses close friends because they think he is dangerous. After that, Adam is doing some treatment for mental disorders. Adam takes medicine from the doctor, but nothing changes. Then, he is transferred to a Catholic school and hopes that he can help alleviate his symptoms. At her new school, he has new friends and is attracted to her. They grow closer and eventually discover that Adam has a mental disorder, namely schizophrenia. But she continues to support Adam and makes him accept his life. The writer concludes that the support of the people closest to him is vital for psychologically treating people with a mental disorder.
