

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

Gender equality is still a topic that will never be finished when discussed. After conducting an analysis it can be concluded that women are always seen as weak, unable to be themselves, and obedient, especially towards men. Not only in the Victorian era, women are still being underestimated, even in modern era, harassment of women still occurs in society. If someone still thinks that a job should be equal to the status or gender he or she has, of course, it will cause problems, such as discrimination in the profession, and the problems experienced by Enola still occur today.

This research thesis discusses about causes, effects, and values of liberal feminism reflected on the main character of Enola Holmes focussing on the tough and courageous attitude that has been mentioned depicted in a film entitled Enola Holmes (2020). Enola Holmes as the main character of the film has a very unique character and a different principle from other Victorian era women. The purposes of this thesis are to analyzes the causes, effects, and values of liberal feminism that refelected in Enola Holmes as the main character of the film. This research method use library research and the research approach used feminism approach with Rosemarie Tong's theory of liberal feminism.

In the intrinsic aspects the writer explains the characteristics of Enola Holmes as the main character film. The writer explains characteritaton, setting of the time, setting of the place, setting of the atmosphere, and conflict. In the extrinsic aspects, the writer discusses about factors related to the depiction of liberal feminism in the film, such as the habits that Enola does, the clothes Enola wears, and the tulip flower as the symbols of graceful, charming, and spirit through several types of flowers.
