

CHAPTER 4

CONCLUSION

As the new current generation starts to rise as the majority group in the society, the young feminists bring various new fresh ideas in which they got from their own experience through the society they live in. Facing sexism, and misogyny, they realize it takes sisterhood that is rooted in shared commitment to fight against patriarchal injustice is the key. Especially for young women in America. From Vivian's growth through her self-discovery journey, to Lucy's educative and passionate way of showcasing her feminism, to Claudia's calm approach and her law-abiding contribution to the movement, Moxie deals with toxic institutionalized patriarchy in high school and it shows how being aware, taking action, and welcoming to everyone is how you can dismantle patriarchy. Those three young women proves that there are more than one ways to become a feminist. They show that there is power in numbers, allyship, and diversity, as there is also true power in the individuality, uniqueness, in our own thought and experience intended to empower each other, and complement each other in order to succeed in the goals of challenging the status quo of toxic patriarchal culture that harms the school and the fabric of gender equality itself in which comes as they focusing on their activism as the core of the fourth wave of feminism that they are living in. Their fight therefore overthrows the sexist and misogynistic culture that derives from the patriarchal culture that still exists and is experienced by young women in present-day America.
