

ABSTRACT

This study aims to find out the description of the results of the collection development policy evaluation at the National Library of the Republic of Indonesia (PNRI) on the Nusantara Manuscript. The method used in this research is descriptive qualitative research method with case study approach. Data collection techniques are observation, interviews and document study. The results of this study found that PNRI has a written collection development policy that is used as a reference for collection development activities that contain coverage, collection, and collaboration with parties related to the Nusantara Manuscript. After the SWOT analysis in this study found that PNRI has a weakness of the internal environment which is primarily a budget. and threats from the external environment, especially cultural traditions and rituals. PNRI also has the strengths and opportunities that can be utilized in the development of the Nusantara Manuscript collection, namely the existence of a legal foundation that supports the development process of the Nusantara Manuscript collection and the existence of human resources who understand the Nusantara Manuscript with a Philological education background to increase access to information content on the Nusantara manuscript. SWOT analysis can be an input for PNRI in evaluating collection development policies in PNRI in the Nusantara Manuscript collection for the future based on consideration of the strengths and opportunities that PNRI has in developing the Nusantara Manuscript collection.

Keywords: collection development; collection development policy; nusantara manuscript collection development policy; SWOT analysis